Wood Grain Collection

The Classic styling at its very best. The beautiful cabinet doors create the impression of hand-built quality and the subtle woodgrain and warm honey tones of oak are punctuated with black granite worktops and bold metallic accessories. This pulls the whole look together.

MODISH series

The Old World techniques used to create textured finishes give a dwelling warmth, texture, and elegance that offer any home owner, architect or designer an opportunity to create a unique atmosphere. Requiring almost no maintenance, these finishes can be as simple or functional as you would like them to be.

If you've chosen wood cabinets, you'll need to decide between leaving your wood in its natural state, which means to simply apply a clear varnish; staining it, which will add color, but still allow the grain of the wood to show through; and painting it, which adds opaque color and obscures the grain. This choice depends solely upon your own personal preferences, although if you've chosen a very expensive wood, it's a bit silly to cover it up with paint! Plus, painting kitchen cabinets can take time and the paint color may not look as classic as the color of natural wood.

Kitchen Planning Schemes

Choosing from an unlimited number of kitchen color schemes can be a daunting task. Here are seven essential steps to take when selecting colors for your kitchen remodel. While it may be helpful, it is not necessary to follow these steps in order.

STEP 1 - Choose your cabinet colors. Kitchen cabinets typically take up 50% of your budget and occupy about 40% of the visual space in your kitchen. For these reasons, most people start out by choosing a cabinetry color that fits their tastes before choosing other colors in their kitchen.

STEP 2 - Choose your appliance colors. Your cabinetry cannot be finalized until you know which appliances you intend to buy. As focal points, your sink and appliances can have a big impact on your kitchen color scheme.

STEP 3 - Choose your countertop colors. Your kitchen countertops are close to eye level and will occupy a large portion of your visual space. Be sure to bring a sample of your cabinetry color to help you choose a coordinating countertop color.

STEP 4 - Choose your flooring colors. When selecting a kitchen floor color, be sure it coordinates well with the cabinets, countertops, and appliances, as well as with the floors in adjoining rooms.

STEP 5 - Choose your backsplash colors. By now your kitchen color scheme is nearly complete. There are many backsplash options that can either coordinate or clash with your color scheme, so if you need extra help, don't hesitate to enlist the services of a designer when selecting a backsplash.

STEP 6 - Choose your wall colors. This is the often forgotten backdrop to the overall color scheme. While your walls are often covered with cabinets, it's a good practice to choose a wall color that coordinates well with the more prominent elements in the kitchen.

STEP 7 - Choose your hardware colors. Your faucets and cabinet handles are installed last, after the cabinets and granite have been completed. While it is common to coordinate the faucets and handles colors, it is not required.
